Are quitters winners on the job scene?

A recent study says a large number of Indians feel that they must keep changing jobs to move up the ladder. Speak Up asks if the way career growth is jumping from one organisation to another

The total cost of the lift project was estimated to be about Rs 2.5 lakh.

Sr citizens help ‘uplift’ Matunga society

The Lokmanya co-op (co-operative) housing society in Matunga (W), one of the oldest co-operative societies in Mumbai, founded in 1946 as the concept of the co-operative movement spread nationwide in India, has 13 members housed in ten buildings with one common room on the ground floor. Members have been residing in this society for more than three decades. The society is run by a committee of 15 members, three of whom are elected annually from the members. The committee has the authority to make all decisions. The society has a management committee to which all members are elected. The management committee has the power to make all decisions.

The society has been in the process of installing lifts in all 10 buildings since 2008. The initial cost of the lift project was estimated to be about Rs 2.5 lakh. However, due to some structural problems, the society had to spend additional funds to complete the project. Despite this, the society was happy with the outcome and has recommended the installation of lifts in other co-operative societies in Mumbai.

Two years have passed since the first of the nine lifts was installed. However, due to some structural problems, the society had to spend additional funds to complete the project. Despite this, the society was happy with the outcome and has recommended the installation of lifts in other co-operative societies in Mumbai. The society has also recommended that other co-operative societies in Mumbai install lifts to improve the quality of life for their residents.

COMMUNITY LIVING

The Lokmanya co-op (co-operative) housing society in Matunga (W), one of the oldest co-operative societies in Mumbai, founded in 1946 as the concept of the co-operative movement spread nationwide in India, has 13 members housed in ten buildings with one common room on the ground floor. Members have been residing in this society for more than three decades. The society is run by a committee of 15 members, three of whom are elected annually from the members. The committee has the authority to make all decisions. The society has a management committee to which all members are elected. The management committee has the power to make all decisions.

The society has been in the process of installing lifts in all 10 buildings since 2008. The initial cost of the lift project was estimated to be about Rs 2.5 lakh. However, due to some structural problems, the society had to spend additional funds to complete the project. Despite this, the society was happy with the outcome and has recommended the installation of lifts in other co-operative societies in Mumbai.

Two years have passed since the first of the nine lifts was installed. However, due to some structural problems, the society had to spend additional funds to complete the project. Despite this, the society was happy with the outcome and has recommended the installation of lifts in other co-operative societies in Mumbai. The society has also recommended that other co-operative societies in Mumbai install lifts to improve the quality of life for their residents.